OBERHAUSEN

The history of the modern city of Oberhausen can be traced back to the water castle in Holten – today a district of Oberhausen – which was first mentioned in historic documents in 1188. While it all began as a countryside village, in the 18th century the city became an important spot in Germany due to industrialization and mining, especially of iron ore at the beginning and coal later on.

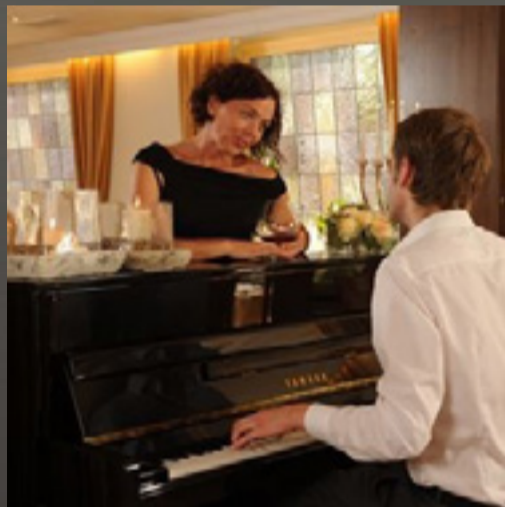

In 1897, the first German city tram started running in Oberhausen, and it became home to the first new theater after World War II in the Ruhr Valley. Over the last 100 years, Oberhausen kept adding new and newer leisure attractions. By now, Oberhausen became one of the most entertaining and worth-to-live-in places in western Germany and features a great variety of attractions of all sorts from culture to sports and tourism and much in between. Be surprised!

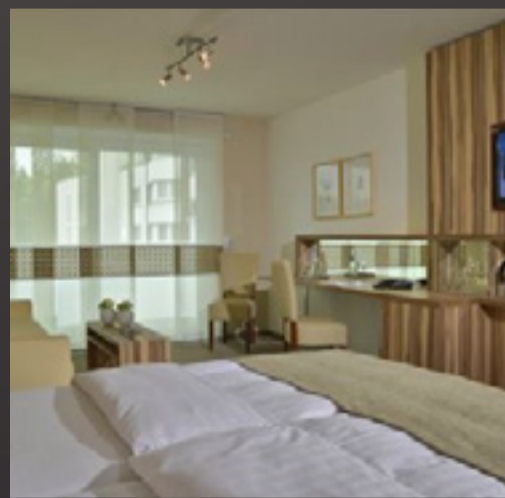

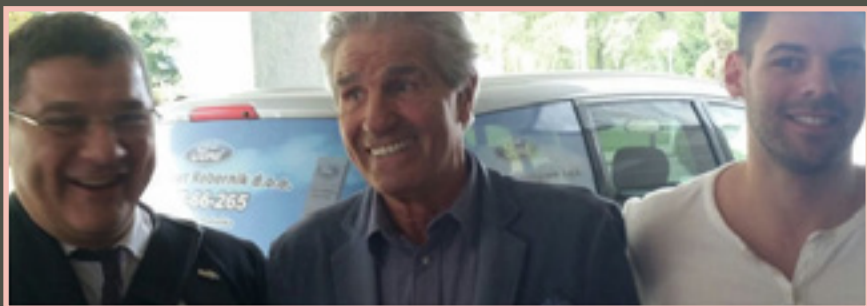

PARKHOTEL ★★★★★

The stylish and very modern Parkhotel in Oberhausen can actually look back on a more than 100-year history, being founded as a simple restaurant in 1906 by Bernhard Wischermann under the name “Zur Bockmuehle”. A few generations later, the family still owns the premises and have developed it into one of the finest hotels in the Rhein-Ruhr valley. However, the Parkhotel – even though featuring top standard with all facilities required from a way-above-standard hotel – still oozes a family atmosphere and thus fits in greatly with the World Boxing Federation, which also prides itself on a unique closeness with everyone. With its close proximity to many attractions, the Parkhotel is the perfect host for the upcoming WBF World Convention.

WBFF CONVENTIONS

The World Boxing Federation is many things, but there are also many (negative) things we are NOT, and never will be! High on this list is that we don't want to be a "plastic organization" which is nothing but a mostly low-budget website and, of course, an account number for you to send your money to.

We invest in our "product" to give the boxers a real title, a title they can actually be proud of. This begins with quality reporting about our champions by a full-time media team who is always at your disposal and continues with top-class USA-produced championship belts instead of cheap cardboard belts put together in some obscure countries.

The most important investment, however, are our WBF Conventions where the WBF team gets together with champions, promoters, managers, officials and anyone else who has an interest in the World Boxing Federation. These get-togethers provide the opportunity for exchange, education, information and, sure enough, celebration of those people who matter most to us: The past and present Champions of the World Boxing Federation. Obviously, the WBF Championship Boxing Night traditionally is the highlight of each Convention weekend.

Make sure you don't miss the next WBF Convention in Oberhausen and experience a true family atmosphere!
